Police's itineraries in the multi-professional network for the prevention of juvenile delinquency

Fecha de la última modificación: 3 Jun 2009. 23 visitas

Acrónimo: ITER

Fecha de inicio: 1 Sep 2008

Fecha de finalización: 1 Sep 2010

Programa de la CE: LEONARDO DA VINCI

País: Spain, Italy, Denmark, Bulgaria

A series of training courses is being devised relating to the prevention of juvenile delinquency between the agents of the participating security services, those families in which the problems occur will be analysed, and cooperating organisations will give informal talks in schools among other activities in an effort to raise awareness and help prevent problems.

Various studies have shown that juvenile violence and delinquency are delicate problems to treat owing to a series of linked causes: parents, against the aggression of the youngster, leave the tasks of education to the school. yet the teacher cannot concern him or herself with behavioural education in addition to academic instruction, so when faced with a lack of respect it is common that the teachers find themselves unable to control the situation and the police are required to intervene, on many occasions in an aggressive manner which does little for the education of the youth.

With this in mind, the regional council of Alicante has designed a series of police itineraries in a multi professional network for the prevention of juvenile delinquency which is undertaken by the European project ITER. The main objective of the project is to attain the involvement of all those working in and responsible for, young learner education, through the creation of a cooperation network geared at avoiding delinquency and juvenile violence. ITER wants to increase the involvement of policy bodies to prevent juvenile violence, to improve the interaction between the Police and those families which have the problem and to promote cooperation between the different associations and organisations involved in this field.

To achieve this objective, a series of training courses is being devised relating to the prevention of juvenile delinquency between the agents of the participating security services, those families in which the problems occur will be analysed, and cooperating organisations will give informal talks in schools among other activities in an effort to raise awareness and help prevent such problems.

Iter is a European project led by the Regional Council Alicante and counts on the Fundación Comunidad Valenciana-Región Europea as partner and leader in marketing and dissemination, Vidscenter for Integration of Denmark, the City Council of Latina in Italy and the National Association of Municipal Clerks in Bulgaria

The Project also counts on different collaborative bodies: the Valencian Association of Heads of Police Officers, the AYO Association, the Public Defender of Minor of the Alicante High court, the Socials Affairs Department from the Montesinos and Callosa de Segura City Councils, the Timoneda Association, the Valencian Society of Family and Community Medicine, the “Dones i comunicació” Associations, and other students’ parents’ associations.
